An Impertant Point-Oversight as to Adam's Day-Woman in History-Her Claim to the World-A Pertentous Fact-Growth of Feminius Tures-The "Heretical Trinity"-A Gentle Floud-Further Developments-The Bicycle in Politics-The Generous Offer of Mr. Walters. BALTIMORE, April 12th, 1889.

One of the most noticeable points of the higtory which the civilized world is making for itself at this date, is the progress which the movement for the development of woman has thus far achieved. Whatever advancement our illustrious aucestor, Adam, may have accomplished for the world, must be conceded to have been the product of his own manly genius, and he ought to be accorded the full honor and glory of it. The records of our race upon this point are very meager, however; and we are consequently unable to bestow upon that much criticised gentleman the amount of laudation which we would gladly tender him. It is a great pity that he did not leave us a full account of his exploits, so that we might have known the extent of our indebtedness to him, and would not have been obliged to go on, through all these centuries, piling up a debt of gratitude that should have been paid by the successive generations of men as they played out their little lives upon the world's stage. It would have been very nice, for instance, ubilant "Adam's Day," upon which his numerus family could unite, through all the ages, in recounting his glorious deeds and celebrating his memory, as well as in confessing and cultivating the great bond of brotherhood that holds the world together. Nobody can tell now, what a blessing such a momorial occasion would have been to mankind; nor how much we have age, by somebody's oversight in failing to establish such a holiday. A tribute of this sort would certainly be much more effective than the monument which Mark Twain proposes to erect, at this late day, to the dead old gentle-Maryland. One man has a bag open to catch Of course, it is too late for us to get up any such celebration at this stage of the world's proceedings, because we have lost all knowledge of any proper day to celebrate. But the old patriarchs ought really to have attended to this, since so many of them lived in Adam's time; for he did not die until the father of the Treasury Department, assigning as a reason | Noah was over fifty years of age. And Methuthat it was necessary to reduce the force of the | selah, who must have known Adam for about 250 years, is said to have lived up to the very time of the flood; in fact, there is a Jewish tradition that the flood was delayed for two weeks

And if it is not permissible for us to say anything but good of the dead, the keeping breach than in the observance.' But this duscussion of Adam is an unintentional digression. The point to be made is that it really seems as though the world had very little history of any sort worth mentioning, except the mere fact of the creation of things, until woman appeared upon the scene. Then the ball began. And everything has been whirling ever since. She could not be satisfied until she got man turned out of Eden; and ously. And therefore, in the early ages of the | ally engaged. world it became necessary to subjugate her; otherwise existence upon this planet would have become utterly impossible.

This necessary procedure is what is meant by the "tyranny of man," and "the wrongs of woman," and similar war cries of which we hear so much in these latter days. But these cries are misleading. Woman, being younger than man, sustained towards him the relation of a small boy to a large one: and being of an exceedingly mischievous sort, she was promptly suppressed, for the time being; though she meant to have the world for herself, when she came of age, all the same. It has really been her own world, and she has known that it was quiet life. Dr. Jacobs, a celebrated New York hers, ever since she has been in it. She has is up." In Leavenworth, Kanto friends of the colored men and the place ass, the other day, nearly 4,000 women voted in their candidate, too. And in Oskaloosa, and Cotton wood Falls, in the recent elections, not one man was elected to office. The despatches say that the women "captured the offices by sweeping majorities;" and "the Mayor and all the city fathers are ladies." Can anybody tell us what the world is coming to if the atream of feminine tendency continues to flow in this direction?

This rushing of woman into public life, is the most remarkable, and most portentous fact in her history. Indeed, no circumstance in all human history, and no development of our modern life, has a greater or more startling significance. For the end of such a movement cannot be discerned from the beginning. Like all the great movements which have swayed the human race this new departure of femininity will probably go a long way farther than its projectors ever contemplated; and the outcome of this venture may produce results as deplorable as they are unexpected.

Women have talent, to be sure; and they women have talent, to be sure; and they have executive ability, and energy, and persistence, and they are bound to accomplish something in this new understand that their talent is a two-edged sword which is going to do execution in opposite directions. They mean well—the good ones; blessings be upon them—in their case by the atorm of Saturday and Sunday last. The U. S. steamer Pensacola, which was upon the Dry Dock at Norfolk undergoing repair, was floated across the dock, filled with water and sunk. Efforts are now being made to raise her and sunk. In West Virginia and Western Maryland snow to the have executive ability, and energy, and persiswith her new powers, may be found in certain of the books which women have recently written. Notably in "Robert Elsmere," "John Ward, Preacher," and "Three Years on an Africas Farm." All of which are powerful works, in their way; and all so avowedly aiming at the subversion of Christian doctrine that they have obtained for themselves the distinctive title of the "Heretical Trinity." And, of course, they are all bound to exercise an evil influence upon a certain class of minds, attacking human nature upon its emotional side as they do. But they are not only illogical in their structure; they are all actually reasonless, and furnish no proofs, nor even arguments, as the basis of their conclusions. They merely state that their characters arrive at such and such conclusions, without showing the processes by which such conclusions were reached; and of course there are numbers of reasonless persons who will accept such results as though they were mathematical demonstrations.

The wouder is not, of course, that women should write in any such reasonless fashion; but it is amazing that the gentle, loving, tended, with him prove; Hastiville, C. A. Day; Hereron, J. M. of human hearts the hopes that have sustained them through the trials of life. It seems incredible that the soft and delicate hand of woman can rudely match away from simple souls the comforts of their faith, and the consolations of rollgion, and plunge them into the depths preofs which demanded to be thus presented as | 000. If 13 cents more are added for paying for preaching them might be undertaken. But the | the old Bolton Depot property the rate will be the truth, we can see how the painful duty of doctrines unnecessarily, seems either insane, or | which would make $2.234. The budget is as else diabolical. When we observe, too, how woman has recent ly developed as a barn-burner, we can see that her ambition to excel in the masculine virtues, may also lead her to enitivate, on the other hand, any imaginable sort of masculine vices. And when, besides this, we are confronted with the possibility of the actual transformation of womanheed into membeed which has claims sufficiently strong to demand priestly recognition, why we may very well wonder what the world is coming to, finally. If the result of the woman's movement for woman's rights is really to eventuate not only in the development of the mesculine character in women, but to convert them into a new race of men, the world may well stand against; for the end of this dispensation is nigh. The readers of the JOURNAL who wish to at New York : visit the Walters Art Gallery should remember that the Saturdays of April, and Easter Mouday, will be their last opportunities of doing so, even upon the payment of the regulation half dollar. There are some persons who think that if Mr. Walters could offer New York city a gift of $10,000 wherewith to keep the Metropolitan open to the public on Sundays, he might e generous enough to open his own gallery free to his own townsfolk occasionally. Especially in view of the fact that New York delined his proffered gift.

WASHINGTON, April 8th, 1889. Poor President Harrison. The New York gang have made his life a torment for the last week. They have figuratively jumped on him and wiped up the floor with him. They have and eminently proper, for that great man's de-scendants to have kept an annual festival, a way all at the same time. All the factions have been strongly represented here. The hone of contention has been important Federal offices of New York city, with the enormous patronage that goes therewith. It was one of these same offices that drove

With all this to think about lost of peace, and harmony, and pride of line- I imagine that Mr. Harrison, with his pale, careworn face, has wished the whole crowd in Halifax more than once. As yet he has decided upon only two of these officials, Erhardt, who allowed himself to be put up last Novem ber as the Republican candidate for Mayor b New York city, when he knew that it was the intention of his party to trade him off for votes for Harrizon. He is rewarded by being appointed Collecter of Customs for the port of New York. The other is Van Cott, who is made Postmaster in place of the Mugwump Pearson, whose reappointment by Mr. Cleveland four years ago doubtless cost the Democrats many votes in New York. The fight is still on over the other appointments and is likely to continue until they are made, unless Harrison runs away for a few days' as he has

ARBOR DAY.

Gov. Jackson will av denhe deal highly grat-people that the Moment Changlie Church is inimical to liberty in America. All such should read the following patriotic sentiments in a circular letter of Cardinal Gibbons addressed to the clergy of the Diocese of Baltimore upon the approaching centennial of the first inauguration of George Washington on the 30th inst. at New York:

Rev. Dear Rir:—On Tuesday. April 30th next, as you are doubtless aware, the cluzens of the republic will unite in celebrating the Centenary of the Inauguration of George Washington the, Eather of his Country and First President of the United States.

To Washington will remain the imperishable glory of leading this people out of the house of boudage and oppression into the clear light of freedom and national prosperity. The history of these United States is the history of the gradual rising from the foundations of liberty and law and order by him so deeply and so broadly laid, of that stately fabric of our national institutions, which has become the admiration of the world. Therefore do we testify our love for him, and endeavor to repay a small fraction to the inestimable debt we owe to his memory by giving his name to fair and thriving his memory by giving his name to fair and thriving cities, from our great capital westward, to lofty mountain peaks and mejestic ships, and to our sons by thousands. His name, too, with wider range and deeper import, is cherished in the hearts of all.

Most just and fitting it is that this nation, so foun. ded, rising so magnificently upon the lines which he laid down, should honor with especial and gratefull commemoration the hundredth anniversary of the taking by the great captain in war of the chair the taking by the great captain in war of the chair of office in peace, as the chief magistrate of the land he had fought for with such effective valor. To all it should be a matter of profound satisfaction that the citizens of the United States, without regard to race or creed or previous allegiance to any fiag soever, are about to recognize the life and the achievements of the greatest man this Western world has nurtured, as a gift of Almighty God to his own are and as an exemplar to all the ages to be. own age, and as an exemplar to all the ages to be.
In order, therefore, to give expression to our heartfelt thanks for the civil and religious blessings thus far youchsafed to us by the Giver of every perfeet gift, and to pray that the spirit of patrolism which burned in the heart of Washington may continue to animate those to whom the destinies of our beloved country may be entrusted, you are invited, Rev. Dear Sir, to announce, at a seasonable time beforehand, a special service for the morning of April 80th, at nine o'clock, or at any other hour most suitable for the congregation. You are fusther requested at such service to make an address suggested by the occasion, closing with the "Prayer for the Authorities." As an additional expression of joy and thankegiving, the church bells will be rung from 10 to 10:30 the same morning.
